

Review: Citing Second-hand Quotations

Quote: Oxford University professor, Jeffrey McDougal, believes that “The British have always been keen to capitalize on English as a strategic and commercial asset. English is the most widely learned foreign language in Europe, because Britain's partners recognize it as is a necessary communicative tool.”

Author: Robert Phillipson
Title: English Yes, but Equal Language Rights First Newspaper: Guardian Unlimited
Date: 19 April 2001
Website: <http://www.theguardian.com/theguardian/2001/apr/19/guardianweekly.guardianweekly1>
Retrieved date: December 7, 2015 paragraph #: 6

1. Use the information above to write an in-text citation:

2. Write an entry for a bibliography for the above source.

3. If this source didn't have an author, how would you write your in-text citation?

4. If this source didn't have an author and a title, how would you write your in-text citation?
